SURVEY REVEALS TEACHING IS LOSING ITS POPULARITY

Social Work Leads in Occupations Col-lege Girls Are Tabling For. Two "Vocationalized Wives."

Approximately 1,000 students of fomen's colleges, from Virginia to correja, returned their questionnaires the preliminary, survey which has ast been concluded by the Virginia ureau of Vocations in co-operation with the student department of the outh Atlantic field committee of the outh Woman's Christian Association. Ten colleges for women students were included in the survey. They were Westhampton. Randolph-Macon, Villiam and Mary, Hollins, Sweetwar, Meredith, Guilford's Greensboro, a North Carolina and Agnes Scott and Vesleyan, in Georgia.

These were the principal questions: "Have you chosen the calling which ou hope to follow when you leave ollege? If you have, what is it? If our have, do you know how to choose our college courses so as to have

It is significant to note that several of the smaller colleges are making more and more definitely vocational the courses which were formerly offered as merely cultural or womanly arts. This applies especially to Wesleyan, Culiford, Greensborp and Meredith. In the last two of these colleges a four-year course leading to a degree is carefully laid out, and in all these smaller colleges for women courses in music are assuming a distinctly professional character, and are, at the same time carefully correlated with the general scheme of education.
